Mr. Segel had ordered some lumber from the Allen Lumber company, and A. K. Bradley, who works for the company, came to the store to deliver it. He had driven to the front of the store and Mr. Segel asked him to take it to the back of the building. He started to turn his team around when a stick which extended several feet over the back of the wagon was pushed entirely across the sidewalk and through the window.

To-day and to-morrow at the Comique an unusually interesting picture; for tropical interest this picture ranks as one of the best. The earlier scenes show Mr. Roosevelt and his party in Africa, the ex-president shoots a lion and the dead king of the forest is carried away on poles by willing natives. You actually see a huge lion stalking majestically about the picture, enabling an audience to realize how a lion would look among natural surroundings. There is also a magnificent display of an elephant on the stage, also numerous other fine presentations of wild animals.

The Amieles conclude their engagement to-night. All who have not seen this feature should certainly come out to-night. A good song, "Billy Dean," to be sung by Mr. Mahoney. Admission 10c; three performances of vaudeville, one at 7:30, one 8:30 and one 9:30.

In 1860, during the Civil war, there were several girls in the employ of the United States secret service. The story of how one of these brave heroines carried important dispatches from Gen. Logan to Gen. Grant at a critical time is well known to historians. This story is the basis of a fine picture to-day at the Bijou theatre, "For Her Country's Sake." The details are so realistic that old veterans of the war pronounce it well-nigh perfect to facts. With the rest of the program, it makes an entertainment par excellence.
